STORM KILLS TWO; CROPS DAMAGED

Severe Electrical Disturbance Accompanied by Hail

Springfield, Aug. 6—A bolt of lightning during terrific electrical storm which swept the Connecticut valley early yesterday afternoon killed two persons at Feeding Hills and burned one youth so badly he is at Springfield hospital in a serious condition. Josephine Green, 15, of Springfield street was instantly killed and Albert Graziano, 19, of Poplar street died a brief time after being struck. Francis Griffin, 19, of 186 Walnut street, this city, is at the hospital with severe burns on his neck, chest and the front part of his body. He is suffering from shock and his mental condition is affected by the experience.

The heavy downpour of rain which accompanied the storm caused havoc with tobacco crops, the damage last night being placed at $200,000. Windsor Locks, Conn. incurred the heaviest losses, the damage there being estimated at $100,000, while towns around Windsor Locks reported damage which reached the $75,000 mark. In Monson lightning struck a house causing an $8,000 fire. No one was injured as the house was unoccupied.

Great Crop Loss

Hartford, Aug. 6 (AP) — Reports received here last night indicated the damage to tobacco in northern Connecticut by the storm yesterday afternoon is approximately $365,000.

A severe electrical storm, lasting about half an hour, swept from the northwest across the tobacco belt between Simsbsury and Ellington in a path a half mile wide. The damage to tobacco was done by hail which fell for about five minutes.

The heaviest losses were reported in the following places: Windsor Locks, $150,000; Windsor, $100,000; Ellington, $50,000; Warehouse Point, $50,000; Simsbury, $15,000.

The storm struck the tobacco region when one of the best crops in years was ready for harvesting. Several growers had started cutting yesterday and had part of their crops in the sheds when the storm struck.

Hail Fells Plants

A high wind gave force to the ground, riddling the leaves. Tents over the shade grown plantation sagged from the weight of the stones and in many places the ground was covered. In Windsor a large section of tenting was destroyed by lightning and John Butler of Rainbow was stunned when a bolt struck near him.

In Windsor Locks, where $150,000 damage was reported, hailstones as large as marbles fell for five minutes, doing damage to windows in the center. Across the river, in Warehouse Point, there was a loss of $50,000. In both places, many of the growers were not protected by insurance.

The worst damage in Windsor was near St. Joseph's cemetery in Rainbow, where three separate storms struck. One hundred acres of tobacco was a complete loss and more than 100 acres was severely damaged.

Two hundred acres were affected in Ellington where the storm struck just west of a large plantation and swept for fives miles in a path half a mile wide. Lightning struck in two places.

The only large grower in Simsbury who suffered losses was William J. Hayes of Tariffville. He had harvested five acres and had thirty-six acres, which were touched by the storm. His loss is about $15,000, covered by insurance.

Stafford Home Burned

Stafford Springs, Aug. 6 — A bolt of lightning striking the house started a fire which burned to the ground the home of Myron Leonard in Stafford Village with estimated loss of $7,000 shortl yafter 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon . Mr. and Mrs. Cady were absent for the day when the fire occurred. Neighbors who went into the house saved a little of the furniture reported that a large hole ha dbeen torn in the living room. A horse barn near the house and a cattle barn across the road were not damaged.

The Leonard home was considered one of the finest farmhouses in this vicinity. It was located near the Massachusetts line, three miles above Stafford Hollow.

BALTIMORE MAYOR'S HOME DYNAMITED

All the stained glass in the great window in the front of the structure on the Girard avenue side reaching from above the main entrance to near the roof was shattered. Other windows in the buildings were wrecked and the wall on the 42nd street side was cracked.

The second bomb was found ten minutes after the blast wedged in the back of a rain spout. It was said a wire had been attached to it and the mechanicism had failed to work.

Persons sitting on the porches of their homes, which are in a quiet neighborhood, said they had seen no one near the church.

A trolley car that had just passed the church, had some of its windows shattered by the concussion. There were fifteen persons in the car and several who became hysterical were taken to a hospital and given treatment. They had not been injured.

Dr. Bowman, pastor of the church who was visiting in Elizabethtown, Pa., started for Philadelphia early today when notified of the explosion. He was quoted before leaving Elizabethtown as saying that he had not slightest idea who could have perpetrated the outrage. When told that the police had a theory that Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers might have been connected with the outrage, he said he had never referred to the case in his sermons.

The Bowman home is half a block from the church. Mrs. Bowman, the minister's wife was at home.

"Like all other neighbors," Mrs. Bowman said, "I was awakened by the explosion. There was a situation in the neighborhood that really amounted to a panic. It is amazing, mystifying."

Dr. Bowman has been pastor of Emmanuel church since 1911. He is a graduate of Lebanon Valley college. Before coming to Emmanuel church, he held two other pastorates, the longest being at the United Brethren church at Harrisburg, Pa., where he remained nine years, at the conclusion of which he took a post graduate course at Princeton Theological seminary. His other charge was at the Oak street church, Dayton, Ohio.

Precautions in Boston

Boston, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Boston Elevated company early this morning posted special guards in its principal stations here and in Cambridge following reports of bombings in two New York subways and an explosion in a church at Philadelphia. Track-walkers were started patrolling the principal tubes.

As the early morning crowds filled the downtown stations special detectives and other guards scrutinized individuals carefully and paid particular attention to those using the less frequented entrances and exits as well as to passengers who sauntered to the deserted ends of long subway platforms.

Storerooms were locked and in most cases even the wash rooms.

RESERVE TRAILS PARLEY COLLAPSE

Creation of Special Reserve Thought Significant

Washington, Aug. 6 (UP) — Echoes of the Geneva arms conference failure, official, unofficial and semi-official, continued here today.

The navy department announced details of its plans for creation of a naval reserve on private American merchant vessels, whereby crews will be trained in naval maneuvers so they can man armed merchant vessels. This was considered significant, coming so closely after the Geneva collapse.

The Army and Navy Journal declared in an editorial that the United States did not intend to traverse the seas "only with the consent of Great Britain."

The Peoples' Reconstruction league, on the other hand, hinted in a statement that large American corporations had helped to make the conference a failure, asking "shall profiteers force another war"

While the naval reserve movement was authorized at the last congress, no funds were appropriated, and the announcement of plans now is linked up with the effort of Great Britain in the conference to fix a six-inch minimum limit on guns, which was interpreted as indicating her intention to equip merchant vessels with six-inch guns. The United States sought a limit of eight inch guns, which are too heavy for merchant ships.

The department has instructed naval district commandants to confer with owners and operators of American vessels to obtain their cooperation in organizing the new service. An effort will be made to establish it first on vessels operating from New York and San Francisco. Masters of crews will receive a course of instructions on naval tactics for their crews.

"Boiled down to essentials," the Army and Navy Journal editorial said "Great Britain has served notice she will never surrender the supremacy of the seas and that she will not permit equality. We call on the nation to direct congress to provide a navy which will make the United States dominant afloat as it would have been but for the Washington conference."

The Peoples Reconstruction league said the "public announcement of the proposed cooperation" of the Dupont interests, United States Steel and General Motors "followed the evident failure of the disarmament conference."

"They have a highly profitable community of interest in naval competition and in wars to follow," said the league.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 6 (AP) — Two former runners-up unsheathed their mashies today to battle each other in the 36-hole finals to determine which one would be runner-up again and which one champion for the first time in the national public links golf championship at Ridgewood club.

They were Carl Kauffman of Pittsburgh ,who lost in the finals last year at Buffalo to Lester Bolstad of Minneapolis, and William Serrick of New York, who yielded to Ray McAuliffe of Buffalo at New York two years ago.

Both were at the top of their game when they gained the finals this time, Kauffman scoring three under par in eliminating J. R. Miller of Washington, and close to perfect figures in ousting Robert Wingate of Florida yesterday, and Serrick playing virtually as well. Serrick shot [illegible] above par in eliminating B. [illegible] Burrows of Washington, 2 and 1, but he was one stroke sub par later in downing Kendall Morrison of St. Joseph, Mo., five and four.

Kauffman, however, was a slight favorite, as he was qualified with 150 strokes for second place, while Serrick barely got in with 160.

WELFARE BUREAU TO ACT IN ROMAINE CASE

State Organization Notifies Probation Officer That Home Conditions Here Will Be Investigated.

Sympathy for the family of Stanley Romaine of 15 Star street from whom the Connecticut Humane society has taken three children has grown so strong since the mother's two recent attempts to commit suicide through grief, that an additional investigation has been ordered by the Connecticut Child Welfare bureau, according to information received today by Probation Officer Edward C. Connolly.

The bureau, which is the organization which conducts investigations will look into conditions at the home thoroughly with a view to acting upon Mr. Connolly's suggestion that the children be returned.

Upon completion of the investigation, a report will be made to the county commissioners and upon their ruling, final disposition will be made of the case. The absence of Former Judge W. C. Hungerford from the city makes it impossible at this time to enlist his aid in an attempt to have the children returned to their parents. Judge Hungerford signed the order turning the children over to the humane society officials at their request.

Those who are familiar with the situation believe if he were acquainted with developments, he would be willing to help return the children.

Edward W. Schultz, county commissioner, has agreed to visit the Romaine home on Star street this afternoon with a view to obtaining personal knowledge of home conditions.

In discussing the case this morning Mr. Schultz pointed out that he could not make any definite statements until he has seen the final report of the welfare bureau. He stated however that he fully believes the investigation will be conducted from an honest, human sympathetic standpoint, rather than that of cold blooded theory, and that if it is found that conditions warrant it, the children may be returned.

Sometimes, Mr. Schultz points out, children are returned to homes on probation. This may happen in the Romaine case, although Mr. Schultz did not commit himself.

Old Law Holds Inn For Theft of Auto

London, Aug. 6 (AP)—In olden days when inns were remote and highwaymen were rampant it was not uncommon for the robbers and the innkeepers to be in league, so laws were passed holding inn keepers responsible for the safety of his guests and their goods.

These laws still stand, and figured in the loss of an automobile valued at 267 pounds, stolen from the parking place of the Bridge House Hotel at Staines. Alexander Dixon Aria, a banker's agent, contended that by the innkeepers act the common law of England was applicable.

Justice Swift pointed out that the law had been framed for hundreds of years and that under it an inn keeper was liable for the safety of his guests and such of their property as came into his custody, and the jury found for the plaintiff in the case.

CLAIMS AMERICAN RIGHTS ARE SAFE

Stevens Says Mexican Oil Holdings Protected

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP)—Discussing the Mexican oil controversy at the Latin-American round table, Guy Stevens, director of the association of producers of petroleum in Mexico, spoke, in part, as follows:

"There is and can be no question of the validity of the titles to the oil rights acquired by American citizens prior to May 1, 1917.

"These rights were acquired by purchase under the mining codes of 1884, 1892 and 1909, which declare petroleum to be of the exclusive ownership of the surface land owner, and which declared the land owner had the right freely to exploit the petroleum without the neecssity of concession or license.

"In 1921, and 1922, however, the supreme court of Mexico held that the petroleum rights were merely inchoate rights, and could be withdrawn from the landowner at any time by new legislation, provided that the owner had not, in the meantime, converted them into vested rights by the performance of some 'positive act' manifesting an intention to appropriate the petroleum to his use. The court, in very clear terms, held that the constitutional declaration of national ownership might not be applied to lands upon which 'positive acts' had been performed prior to May 1, 1917, because such applications would violate a guaranty of the constitution providing against that very thing. For the most part, the properties involved, come under the 'positive acts' classification, and the supreme court has said that the oil companies had vested rights in these properties, not affected by national ownership.

Antone Weber, fourth engineer, and four oilers were hailed as heroes by the 1,500 passengers for their prompt work in shutting off steam from the crippled engine and preventing further damage.

Weber and his men crawled through the engine room filled with steam and while the oilers held his legs, the engineer found and closed the steam valve.

NEWSPAPERMAN VISITS VANZETTI'S OLD HOME

Old Priest Says He Always Had Advanced Ideas But as An Honest Man, Apparently

Villa Falletto, Italy, Aug. 6 (UP) —A United Press correspondent arrived here, Vanzetti's birthplace, last night to interview the condemned man's family. He found the tiny village among the mountains asleep and apparently unaware of the imminent execution of one of its former citizens alone in America.

"I knew Vanzetti since his boyhood," the parish priest told the correspondent. "Although his ideas were somewhat advanced, he was horest and kind hearted."

Vanzetti's father and sister failed to grasp the irrevocability of Governor Fuller's decision and their main anxiety centered around the difficulties another sister was having at Boulogne-Sur-Mer to get passage on a steamer for America.

The family had just that day received two letters from Vanzetti dated July 14 and 18 in which he gave his impressions of the investigations then being made by Governor Fuller and his advisory committee.

Vanzetti wrote that Presidents Lowell of Harvard and Stratton of M. I. T. apepared unprejudiced "but Judge Grant is manifestly hostile."

He urged his family to be calm, strong and hopeful.

"I hope the last word has not yet been said," Vanzetti's father, 80 years old and completely deaf, told the correspondent.
